Writing

Too many toys?

In my opinion, children must have a lot of toys, because they develop their minds and imagination. Some toys can improve their skills in writing and reading. On the other hand not every child will use this opportunity. Sometimes parents don't think about their children's future life, because they think that their child is too small for it. So too many toys can be bad for their children and they can do more harm than good.

Nevertheless, in my childhood I had a lot of toys and I'm grateful for it. I had a lot of opportunities to develop my mind. At the age of three I could read, count and write a little bit on Russian language. My favorite toy was a hors called "Korsy". I liked her very much. She was with me everywhere. She had got big turkwise eyes, maroon ponytale and a big, kind smile. She could bouncy with me around the house.

So in conclusion, I would like to say that every child must have a large number of toys and love from their parents.
